Have you compared their file sizes via Finder and Windows Explorer?

In Finder select the .pdf file and press CMD+I and look under size and compare that number to the one you get in Windows. Bytes would be preferable, as Mac OS X 10.6 (Snow Leopard) reports file sizes differently than Windows does.

If the .pdf file is not private or something, you can attach it to this thread and we can take a look at it if you want.

HELP!!! PDF viewing problem

I am a relatively new Mac user. I have been emailed a PDF attachment and when i try to use preview to open it, I get the message "cannot open file. The file may be damaged or use a file that preview can recognise" I installed adobe reader and viewer and I get similar messages. I know the file is not corrupt or damaged as I can open it on my vista laptop. please help. Thanks
